

The court further finds that certain real property hereinafter described, and as it appears from the recorded deeds, was purchased by Henry J. Seehardt and Anna Seehardt as joint tenants, and not as tenants in common, with the right of survivorship, and upon the death of said Henry J. Seehardt the whole title in and to said real property became and was vested solely in said Anna Seehardt, the survivor.

The court further finds that the money deposited in the banks of Hastings, Nebraska, was payable to said Henry J. Seehardt or Anna Seehardt, either or survivor, and upon the death of said Henry J. Seehardt the whole title of said account and money became the property of and was vested solely in the survivor, Anna Seehardt.
